QUESTION 1

(15,0 points)

Answers will be considered and appreciated according to the candidate's ability to structure his ideas, examples and reasons in the given context and in a coherent way, establishing linkages across issues involved in the teaching and learning of reading, writing and reading-writing interaction.

Applicants must show proper recognition of some of the many layers of knowledge, skills and social aspects being combined when reading and writing interconnect in L2, such as: language knowledge; topical knowledge; background knowledge; cognitive abilities involved; L1/L2 differences affecting teaching and learning of reading-writing; individual differences, motivation, and social contexts that shape student performances; accumulation of experiences from engaging reading-writing tasks as critical for successful performance; varying goals of students.

Ideas about instructional practices and examples must consider some of the following: task analyses; writing practice of many types of relevant genres; awareness of text structure; reading strategies; writing strategies; use of feedback from peers and teachers; collection and interpretation of data; appropriate use of textual resources in writing tasks, either on line or in hard copy; summary of main ideas and from a text.
